The Volunteer Fair and the Benefits of Service

Stop by the Volunteer Fair to find out how to get involved! Learn how to make a difference in your community!!

Volunteer UWF! is hosting it's semi-annual Volunteer Fair on Tuesday, September 11, 2007 from 10AM – 2PM in the Commons Auditorium, Building 22.

The Fall 2007 Volunteer Fair will bring together over 30 local not-for-profit organizations and Volunteer UWF! Community Partners to raise awareness of community needs. It is a great opportunity for students to network and seek out service locations while learning about upcoming volunteerism and service learning projects. Furthermore, it is the opportunity to meet with local non-profit agencies; find exciting volunteer opportunities on and off campus; test out a field of study or interest area; and learn how to give back to your community!!! Students bring valuable skills to our local community. Spending time between classes and on weekends can bring new energy into an agency while giving a student the opportunity to give back to his or her community. Students will also learn about different career options in the non-profit field. Students can get connected to agencies with recurring volunteer opportunities and one-time events at the Volunteer Fair as well as opportunities for individuals, student organizations and groups of friends interested in doing service together. Volunteering engages students in their community, exposing them to social issues relating to health and wellness, children and families, environment, and community development. Students who are engaged in their community will work to find the solutions to the social problems we face today.

Through participation in service, students have amazing opportunities to serve the needs of their communities. By participating in service experiences students can improve their community, make a difference in someone's life, develop leadership skills, enhance their resumes, network with community members, gain exposure to new career fields, and learn about internship and job opportunities. Service experiences can also help students learn about social issues, area non-profit agencies, about the community, as well as allow them the opportunities to demonstrate commitment to a cause/belief, and empower them to be an agent for change.

Learn how to make a difference in your community! Login to your JasonQuest account to search agencies participating in the Volunteer Fair and to find upcoming volunteer opportunities.
